messaging service plan offers a different set of features. Depending on your messaging service plan, you might not be able to create a BlackBerry email address or add existing email addresses to your BlackBerry device. For information about your messaging service plan, contact your wireless service provider. Basics About finding the web address for the BlackBerry Internet Service To access your BlackBerry® Internet Service account using a browser on a computer, you need the web address that your wireless service provider uses for the BlackBerry Internet Service web site.

To find the web address, try performing one of the following actions: . . . . Check the documentation that came with your BlackBerry device. Check your wireless service provider's web site. Search the Internet for "BlackBerry Internet Service" and the name of your wireless service provider and your country. Contact your wireless service provider for the web address. Open the email setup application Depending on your wireless service provider and the version of the BlackBerry® Device Software that is installed on your BlackBerry device, the email setup application might not be available.

On your device, do one of the following: . On the Home screen, click the Setup icon. Click Email Accounts. . On the Home screen or in the Setup folder, click the Email Setup icon or Email Settings icon. About accessing the BlackBerry Internet Service for the first time The first time that you open the BlackBerry® Internet Service email setup application, or visit the BlackBerry Internet Service web site, you can add a supported email address, create a BlackBerry email address, or do both. Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, you might not be able to add email addresses or create a BlackBerry® email address for your BlackBerry device.

2 User Guide Getting started You might want to add an email address if you have an existing supported email account that you want to access from your BlackBerry device or BlackBerry enabled device. You might want to create a BlackBerry email address if you do not have another existing, supported email account or if you need an additional email address that you can use to send and receive email messages. If you log in to your BlackBerry Internet Service account using a user name and password, the next time that you access the BlackBerry Internet Service web site, you must provide your login information.

About logging in using a user name and password Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, you might not be able to add email addresses or create a BlackBerry® email address for your BlackBerry device. Depending on your wireless service provider, you might be required to provide a user name and password when you access your BlackBerry® Internet Service account or you might be able to access your account automatically when you open the email setup application or visit the BlackBerry Internet Service web site using a browser on your BlackBerry device. If you access your BlackBerry Internet Service account automatically, you can choose to create a user name and password for your account. When you create a user name and password you can access the BlackBerry Internet Service web site using a browser on your computer. If you use Microsoft® Outlook® or Microsoft Outlook Express, you can download a utility from the BlackBerry Internet Service web site that can configure your BlackBerry Internet Service account automatically based on your existing email settings. This utility is only available when you access the BlackBerry Internet Service web site from a browser on your computer. You can create a user name and password in the email setup application or on the BlackBerry Internet Service web site using a browser on your device.

After you create a user name and password, you receive a prompt to validate your email addresses by providing the password for each address. You do not receive email messages on your device until you validate your email addresses. Create a user name and password for your BlackBerry Internet Service account Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, this feature might not be supported. If you access your BlackBerry® Internet Service account using the email setup application or the browser on your BlackBerry® device and you create a user name and password for your account, you cannot change back to access your account without a user name and password. If you access your account using a browser on your computer, you already have a user name and password that you use to log in to your BlackBerry Internet Service account and you do not need to complete Internet Service Contact your wireless service provider to request this information. I do not know if I am using the email setup application or the browser on my device The procedures for setting up and managing email are different depending on how you access your BlackBerry® Internet Service account. To determine which procedures to follow, perform the following actions: To access your BlackBerry® Internet Service account from your device, do one of the following: . On the Home screen, click the Setup icon. Click Email Accounts. . On the Home screen or in the Setup folder, click the Email Setup icon or Email Settings icon. 2.

Press the Menu key. . If the Service Books option appears in the menu, you are using the email setup application. Follow the procedures that are labeled "From the email setup application on your device". . If the Service Books option does not appear on the menu, you are using the browser. Follow the procedures that are labeled "From the browser on your device".

1. 6 User Guide Setting up existing email addresses Setting up existing email addresses Email address basics About adding email addresses Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, you might not be able to add email addresses or create a BlackBerry® email address for your BlackBerry device. When you add a supported email address to the BlackBerry® Internet Service, the BlackBerry Internet Service creates a link between the BlackBerry Internet Service and the email account that is associated with the email address that you add.

This link enables you to send and receive email messages on your BlackBerry device using your email address. With the BlackBerry Internet Service, you can add up to ten supported email addresses and you can create one BlackBerry email address.

If you add email addresses for more than one email account, you can access all of your email messages in the messages application on your device. Email messages continue to be delivered to the existing email account as they were before you added the email address to the BlackBerry Internet Service. You can add email addresses that are associated with the following email account types:

- email accounts that you access through your Internet service provider*
- POP or IMAP email accounts that you access through your Internet service provider*
- email accounts that use a Microsoft® Exchange server that you access using Microsoft® Outlook® Web Access*

Note: Depending on your Internet service provider, you might not be able to add email addresses that are associated with certain email account types. For more information, contact your Internet service provider. Note: Not all devices with BlackBerry® Connect™ software support more than one email address. About user names for email addresses When you add an existing email address, your user name might take one of the following formats:

- login ID: The login ID is the part of the email address before the at sign (@), for example, justinjones in justinjones@example.com. In some cases, this login ID could be the login name that you use to log in to your organization's network.*
- network domain name and login ID: If you work for an organization that uses more than one network domain, the user name might use the format domain\username. For example, if the email address is justinjones@example.*

com and the domain is domain 1, then the login ID is justinjones, and the network domain name and login ID is domain1justinjones. About email message storage Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, this feature might not be supported.

7 User Guide Setting up existing email addresses The BlackBerry® Internet Service stores your email messages that are larger than 4KB on the BlackBerry Internet Service server for 30 days. After 30 days, the BlackBerry Internet Service deletes the email messages from the BlackBerry service infrastructure. The email messages remain on your BlackBerry device, but you cannot reply to or forward these email messages. To reply to or forward email messages, if you have another email account, you can set your BlackBerry email address to automatically forward a copy of email messages that you send from or receive on your device to another email address. For information about how long your email service provider's server stores email messages, contact your email service provider. About wireless email reconciliation Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, this feature might not be supported. If you add an email address to your BlackBerry® device, email messages that you open or delete on your device might be marked automatically as opened or deleted in your email account. Email messages that you delete from your email account inbox (for example, by accessing your email account through a browser on a computer) are deleted from your device.

If you turn off wireless email reconciliation on your device, deleted and opened email messages do not synchronize between your device and your email account. If you have a Microsoft® Outlook® Web Access work email account, an IMAP email account, or a Windows Live™ Hotmail® email account, email messages that you send from your device are copied to the sent items folder in your email account. Likewise, email messages that you delete are copied to the deleted items folder (except for Windows Live Hotmail). Note: Depending on the type of email account you add or the way your email account is set up, wireless email reconciliation might not be available. If you have a work email account that uses Microsoft Outlook Web Access 5.

*5. email messages that you send from your device are not copied to the sent items folder in your email account. Depending on your wireless service provider, wireless email reconciliation for the sent items folder on your device might not be available for your Windows Live Hotmail email account. Email address: Type the complete email address of the email account that you want to add (for example, justinjones@blackberry.com).

Email password: Type the password for your personal email account or the password that you used to set up your email application on your computer. Passwords are usually case sensitive. Email server: Type the address of your messaging server. The address of your messaging server can usually be derived from your email address. For example, if your email address is justinjones@blackberry.com, the address of your messaging server might be mail.blackberry.com, imap.blackberry.com, or pop.

blackberry.com. If you do not know the address of your messaging server, contact your Internet service provider. User name: Type the user name that you use to log in to your email account. Usually, the user name is the part of the email address before the at sign (@), for example, justinjones in justinjones@blackberry.

com. However, it could also be your complete email address. Setup fields for Microsoft Outlook Web Access email addresses Depending on your messaging service plan, these options might not be available. Email address: Type the complete email address of the email account that you want to add. Email password: Type the password that you use to log in to your email account on your organization's network.

Passwords are usually case sensitive. Web Access URL: Type the web address that you use to access your work email account using a browser on your computer and Microsoft® Outlook® Web Access. User name: Type your user name. The user name is the part of the email address before the at sign (@). For example, justinjones in justinjones@blackberry.com. In some cases, this might be the login name that you use to log in to your organization's network. If your organization uses multiple network domains, the user name might follow the format domain\user name. For example, if the email address is justinjones@blackberry.com and the domain is domain 1, then the user name is justinjones, and the network domain name and user name are domain1\justinjones.

Mailbox name: 10 User Guide Setting up existing email addresses Type the mailbox name for your Microsoft Outlook account. The mailbox name is the same as your login name, and it is usually case sensitive. Troubleshooting I cannot open email messages from my email account using my device Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, this feature might not be supported. The email message you are trying to open might be too large. Email messages that the BlackBerry® Internet Service retrieves from supported email applications cannot exceed 5 MB. Using a browser on your computer or the email application on your computer, log in to your email address and open the email message. I cannot add an email address Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, you might not be able to add email addresses or create a BlackBerry® email address for your BlackBerry device. The BlackBerry® Internet Service supports the most common types of email accounts and access options. However, there may be some situations that can prevent you from setting up your email account with the BlackBerry Internet Service. Try performing the following actions:

· Verify that you have provided the correct information for your email account.
· Verify if your email service provider only allows you to access your email account using a browser on a computer, which might prevent you from adding your email address.
· Verify if your email service provider requires you to subscribe to a premium email account to set up your email account with the BlackBerry Internet Service.
· Verify if your email service provider requires you to turn on client access (for example, POP) to set up your email account with the BlackBerry Internet Service. For more information, contact your email service provider. 11 User Guide Setting up a BlackBerry email address Setting up a BlackBerry email address BlackBerry email address basics About the BlackBerry email address Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, this feature might not be supported.

You can create a BlackBerry® email address that you can use to send and receive email messages on your BlackBerry device. You must use your device to access the email messages that are sent to your BlackBerry email address. You cannot read these email messages using a computer. You might want to create a BlackBerry email address in the following situations: · You do not have an existing email address that you want to access using your device. You added email addresses for existing email accounts to the BlackBerry® Internet Service, but you want an additional email address.

You can specify a user name for your BlackBerry email address when you create it. The user name is the part of the email address before the at sign (@), for example, justinjones in justinjones@blackberry.com. To change your user name, you must delete your BlackBerry email address and create a new one. Note: You can only have one BlackBerry email address at a time. About email message storage Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, this feature might not be supported. The BlackBerry® Internet Service stores your email messages that are larger than 4KB on the BlackBerry Internet Service server for 30 days. After 30 days, the BlackBerry Internet Service deletes the email messages from the BlackBerry service infrastructure. The email messages remain on your BlackBerry device, but you cannot reply to or forward these email messages. Only messages with attachments: Specify whether you want to automatically forward a copy of email messages with attachments only. About setting up email message forwarding Note: Depending on your messaging service plan, this feature might not be supported. Depending on your email service provider, you might be able to specify options to forward incoming email messages from another email account to your BlackBerry® email address. You might encounter one of the following situations: · · · Your email service provider might allow you to set up email message forwarding. Your email service provider might set up email message forwarding for you, if you request the service. Your email service provider might not allow you to forward email messages to other email addresses. For more information about setting up or stopping email message forwarding, see the online help in your email account or contact your email service provider. If you use an email application on your computer (such as Microsoft® Outlook®, Microsoft® Outlook® Express, or Apple Mail) to access another email address and your computer is always turned on and has a constant connection to the Internet, you might be able to set up your email application to forward incoming email messages to your BlackBerry email address. For example, to set up email message forwarding in Microsoft Outlook, you can create a forwarding rule for email messages. For more information, see the online help in your email application or contact your administrator.

Depending on your messaging service plan, this feature might not be supported. You can create email message filters to specify which incoming email messages are forwarded from your email account to your BlackBerry® device. Email message filters also determine how the BlackBerry® Internet Service forwards email messages (for example, the BlackBerry Internet Service forwards only email messages that are sent with high importance or the BlackBerry Internet Service forwards only the header of email messages).

You can specify criteria for your email message filters based on who sent the email message, how you were addressed, and what level of importance the sender assigned to the email message. The BlackBerry Internet Service applies email message filters to an incoming email message in the order that the email message filters appear. If none of the email message filters that you create apply to an incoming email message, the BlackBerry Internet Service applies a default email message filter to the email message.
